Dear Al,

After thinking about it, I decided I had better gather together all the information that I have on the LACROIX genealogy so that we don't trip over the same materials. I have located the addresses of some of the Louis Lacroix families and will correspond with them at the same time. I'll let you know what I find out from them too. Our families never kept together after the turn of the century, though I heard my father speak of the family on occasion.

We just started our second semester yesterday. I don't know what the enrollment is like, but I believe we are still about where we projected it would be. Just a few minutes ago my Vice President for Business Affairs came in with some preliminary data on income the first semester. We came out about $15,000 ahead of projections. If that holds up, we have made it through another fiscal year in the black. Of course, our expenditures have to stay in line too.

During the winter months I usually spend my evenings working on family materials. This year I have determined to complete my work on the BANET, MARTIN AND LACROIX families. That should keep my mind off $ and ¢ business that I have to live with every day!

Have a good year. Prayers.

Sincerely in Christ,

C. Charles

City's first North Side Park renamed for Civil War hero

On June 4, 1983, the city opened a new park, called Northside Park, at the site of the old Fort Wayne State Hospital and Training Center on East State Boulevard.

But this was not the first park so named in Fort Wayne. For many years there was another, located in the area west of Spy Run Avenue and north of Fourth Street. Today, it is known as Lawton Park.

That North Side Park originally was a 55-acre parcel of land purchased by the city in 1864 on what was then the northern frontier of the town. It was Fort Wayne's first large park project. (The very first park in Fort Wayne was a small area, opened the year before, in 1863, to commemorate Major John Whistler's fort, near the present-day No. 1 Fire Station on Main Street. This is the fort that was recreated as Historic Fort Wayne, better known today as "The Old Fort").

But there was little sense then of providing a recreational site which we think of today as the function of the city's many parks. In 1864, while the Civil War raged and thousands of Allen County men were in service, North Side Park was opened as a booster project for the city of Fort Wayne. Its main purpose was to provide a permanent site for the Indiana State Fair. A pontoon bridge was even constructed across the St. Mary's River to give the townspeople easy access.

In 1865, the year the Civil War ended, the State Fair was indeed held in Fort Wayne, but it was the first and only time. The powers in the State House managed to get the great event settled in the capital city area, where it has remained since.

CITYSCAPES

North Side Park fell to ruin; in 1872, some of the land was sold to the railroads and many other portions were sold as residential lots.

Revival of the park began in 1894 when a soldiers' monument was dedicated. Following a grand military and civic parade from the court house, along Lafayette and across the river to Spy Run, the community's dignitaries gathered at North Side for the presentation of the monument to the veterans of the Civil War.

But, again, as with most early parks, North Side was not viewed as a recreational area. Not even when the circus came to town was this spot used for the festivities. It was not seemly, and the site remained a commemorative place.

In that same spirit, the park was given a new boost in 1900 when it was renamed Lawton Park in honor of General Henry "Long Hank" Lawton.

Lawton was a bona fide Civil War hero, Indian fighter and professional soldier, who died in the service of his country. He was a historical character who, in real life, outstripped every role played by John Wayne in his war movies. The people of his home town, as he always thought of Fort Wayne, were deeply moved when Lawton was killed in 1899 while leading his troops on a campaign in the Philippines. As in the years after President Kennedy's death, when many public buildings, sites, schools and parks were renamed, the people of that time renamed the old North Side Park and dedicated it to the memory of their city's most outstanding hero.

Henry Lawton was a student at the Fort Wayne Methodist College when the Civil War broke out in 1861. He soon joined the Ninth Indiana Regiment and was in this state's first engagements against the Confederacy. He rose through the ranks from private to captain, fighting at Shiloh and Corinth, at Chickamauga and Iuka. In the Atlanta campaigns with William Tecumseh Sherman, he won the Congressional Medal of Honor, the first Fort Wayne native to have done so. By the end of the war, Lawton, not yet 22, was a colonel.

After the Civil War "Long Hank" (he was 6-foot-3) joined the regular army and fought in the Indian Wars of the western plains and southwest deserts. He campaigned against the Sioux in 1876 (the year General George Custer was killed), and against the Utes in 1879. Most notably, he fought against the Apaches, led by Geronimo in 1886 and 1887. It was Lawton who chased Geronimo for 1,300 miles through the Arizona and Mexican deserts, finally catching the great chief and convincing him to surrender after a dramatic confrontation in the Apache encampment.

Later in his career, Lawton earned the rank of general and served with Teddy Roosevelt in Cuba during the Spanish-American War (1898). In 1899, under the command of General Arthur MacArthur, (Douglas MacArthur's father) Lawton was in charge of the American forces assigned to put down the Philippine rebellion after the Spanish-American War. During a campaign in the Luzon mountains, Lawton was fatally wounded by a sniper.

On Feb. 5, 1900, Lawton's funeral train stopped in Fort Wayne. The Civil War veterans in the Grand Army of the Republic turned out with their old colors, cannons were fired and the casket was placed on view in the unfinished County Courthouse. When the body finally arrived at Arlington National Cemetery, President William McKinley led the chorus who gave tribute to the man who symbolized the might and pride of the late-19th-century American military.

The renaming of North Side Park that year was the most immediate tribute that could be paid to the fallen soldier. It was appropriate, too, since it was the site of the recently erected soldiers' monument. Soon, a cannon from the Spanish-American War was added to Lawton Park, but not until 1921 was the statue of Lawton made.

Although the statue was placed in Lakeside rather than Lawton Park, it was a significant tribute that such feeling still remained, not only two decades after Lawton's death, but even after the larger, more immediate events of World War I which had made many new veterans and heroes.

Lawton pool reflected attitudes

By RICK ANTOINE
Of The News-Sentinel

Fort Wayne's first — and first integrated — public swimming pool saw its last summer season of fun and frivolity end for good Friday.

Built in 1918, the 40- by 120-foot Lawton Park pool initially drew its 200,000-gallon water supply from the adjacent Spy Run Creek, but in 1926, the board of park commissioners installed a filtering system.

In those days, blacks were allowed to swim in the pool only in the mornings, and trouble arose in 1934 when parks superintendent Fred B. Shoaff gave the International Harvester Co. Colored Club permission to use the pool all day during its picnic. Whites showed up demanding the blacks leave, which they refused to do.

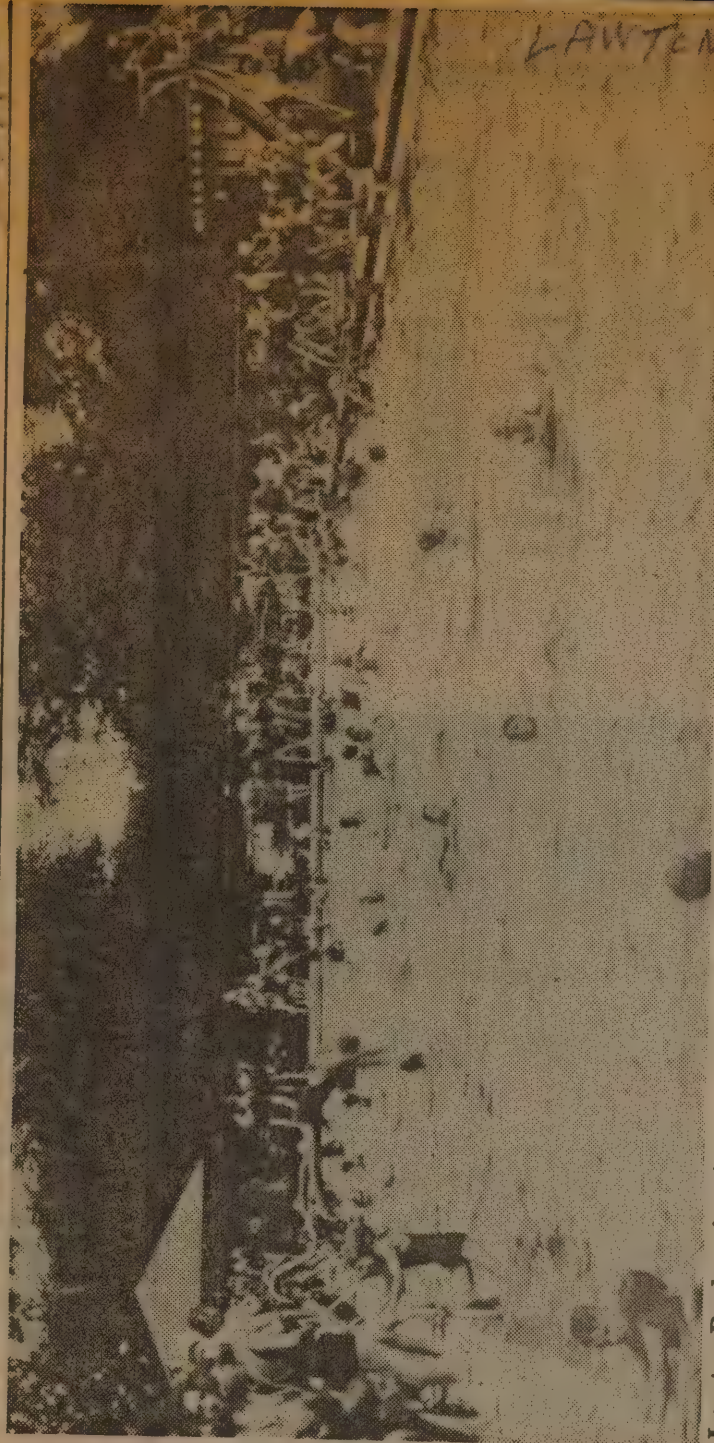

To alleviate that difficulty in 1935, Shoaff said the Colored Club could use the pool all day, but should allow the whites to swim also. Shoaff managed to maintain the peace that year by stationing police officers in the dressing rooms.

Blacks got permission in 1946 to swim all day on Tuesdays and Fridays, and then in 1947, the park board quietly removed all race restrictions on the Lawton pool at the request of a local delegation.

Like the three other city park pools built since, the operation of the Lawton

Lawton Park swimming pool, city's oldest, was segregated from 1918 to 1947.

Park facility never has been financially profitable. The park department was so strapped for funds in 1926 that Oscar Foelinger, then publisher of the News-Sentinel, promised if the park board would install the new filtering system, the newspaper would pay for supervision of the swimmers.

In 1929, the Coca-Cola Bottling Works agreed to rent swimming suits and towels, check valuables and sell popcorn, peanuts, chewing gum, post cards, cigars — and of course, soft drinks.

The first actual admission charge came in 1949. Persons younger than 15 paid 5 cents; between 15 and 18, 10 cents; and 19 and older, 25 cents. Even today, swimmers younger than 16 pay only 35 cents, and those older pay 60 cents.

Lawton pool has had several major renovations. Workers replaced the pool bottom and decks in 1958, sandblasters cleaned it in 1966 and the deteriorating cement was restored in 1976.

A new pool to replace the one at Lawton will open next year in Northside Park, which is being developed on the East State Boulevard site of the former Fort Wayne State Hospital and Training Center.

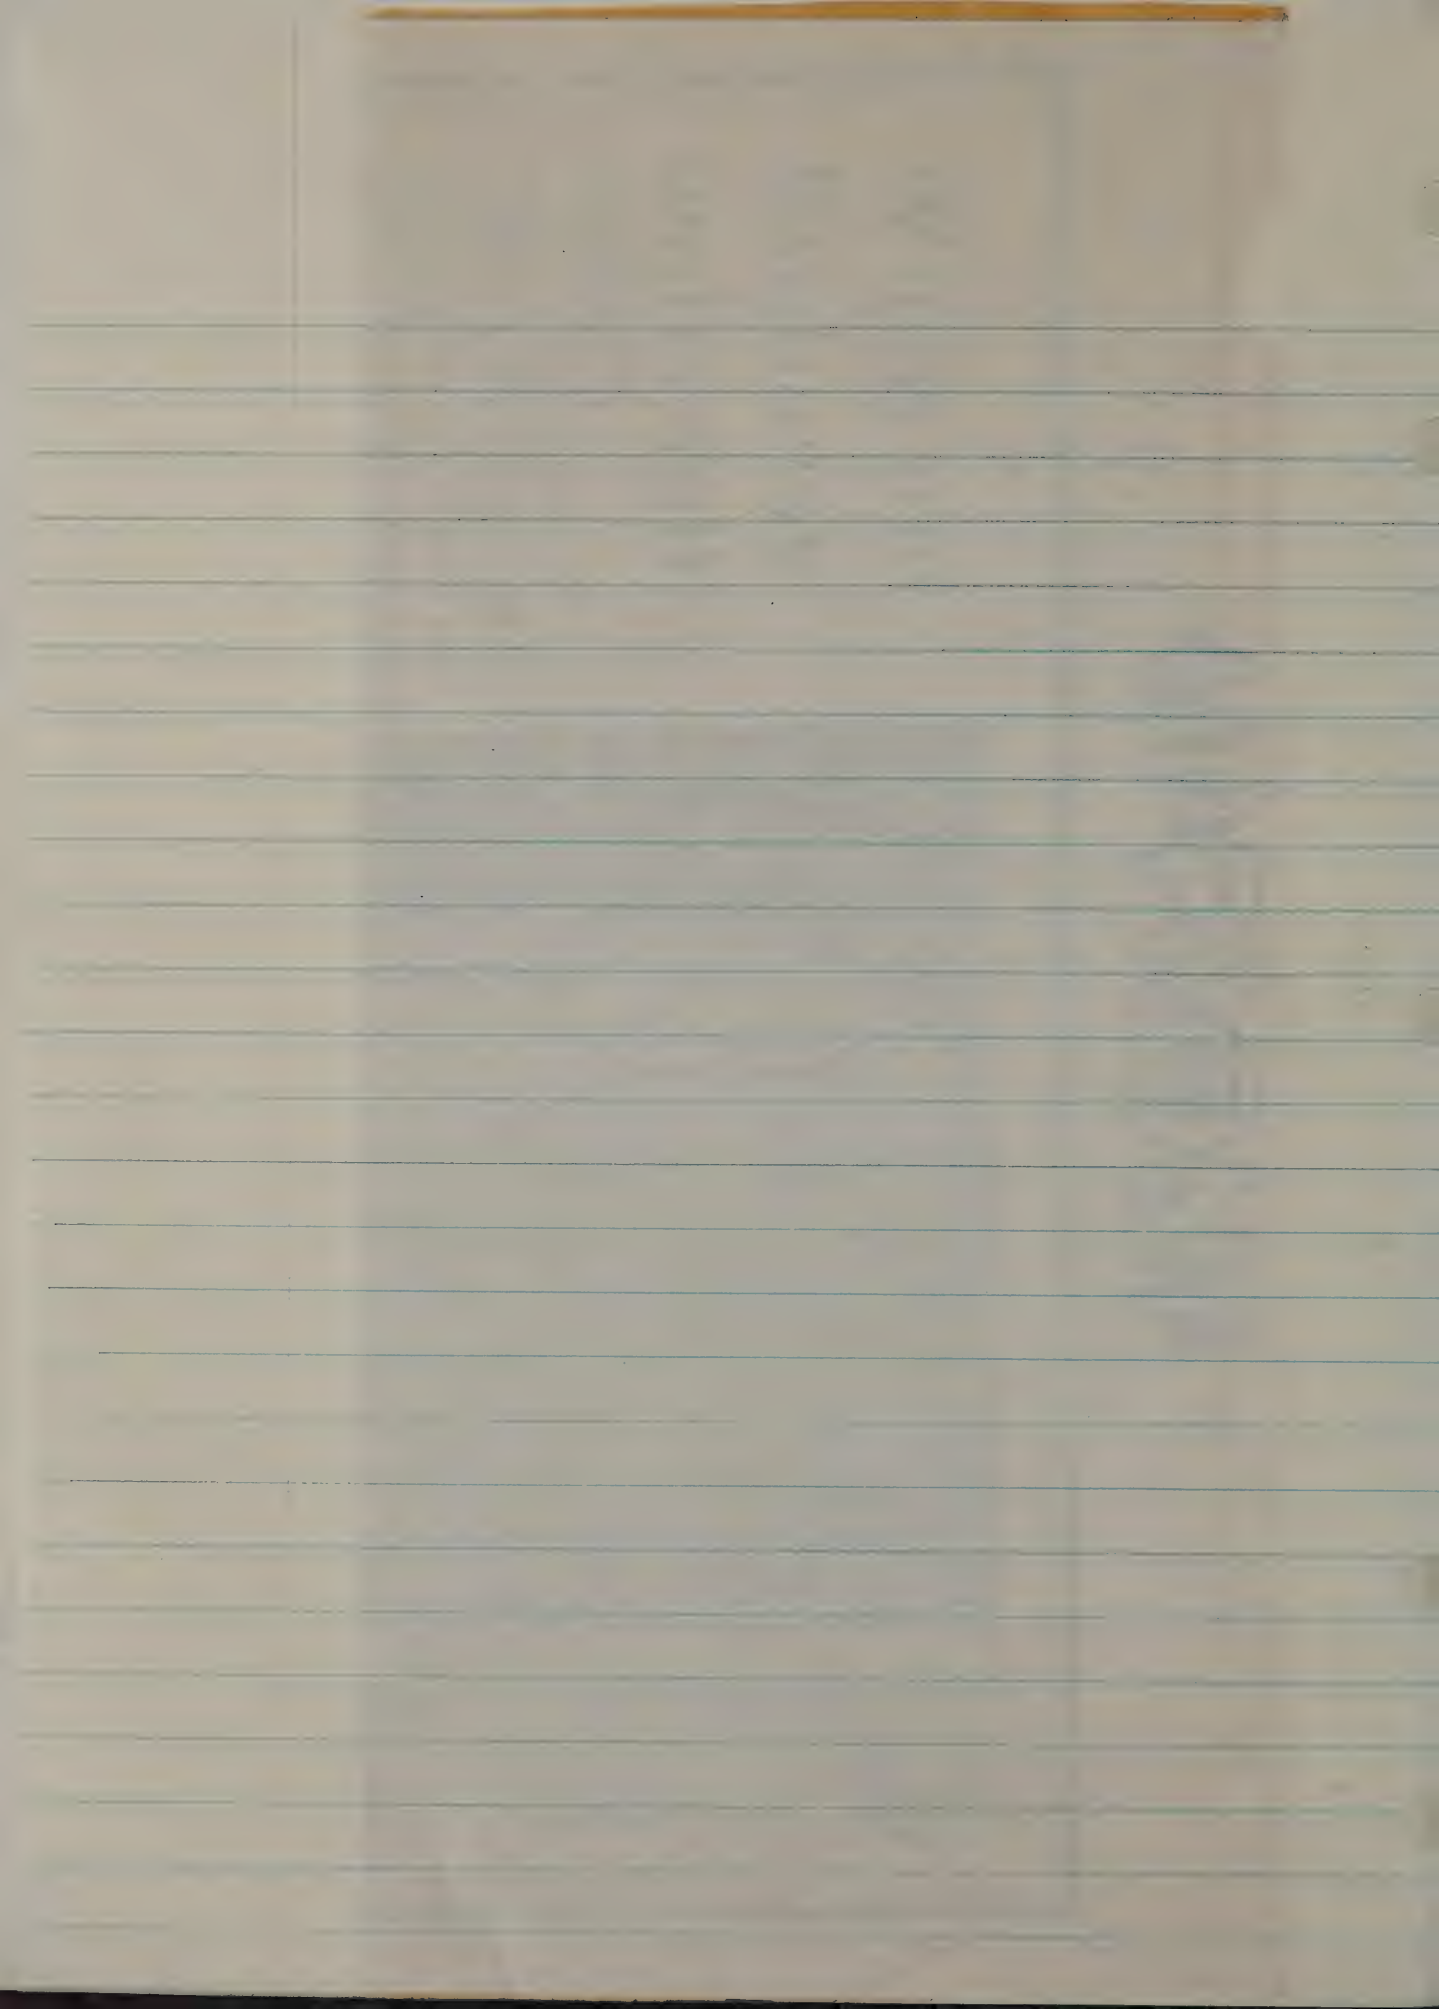

Ironically, Lawton Park's original name was Northside Park. The community purchased the land, which at that time was at the extreme north end of the city, in 1866. The city made it over into Northside Park in the 1870s and dedicated it as a memorial to Civil War veterans.

However, in 1900, after a sniper felled General Henry Lawton in the Philippines following the Spanish-American War, the city renamed Northside Park in his honor.

Students from the Regional Vocational Center have been restoring this house at 1915 S. Lafayette St. since December. The house may date back to 1830 but has been long-vacant and neglected. Restoration is to be completed this summer and the house will then serve as an office and community club, owner Paul Blanks Sr. said.

Vocational students help restore Italianate building

By KEVIN LEININGER
Of The News-Sentinel

Some very young hands have rescued a very old house from the wrecker's ball.

The hands belong to students at the Fort Wayne Regional Vocational Center, who since last December have been restoring the long-neglected house at 1915 S. Lafayette St. The house belongs to Paul Blanks Sr., who believes the home was built in the mid-1800s by Maj. Sam Lewis.

Lewis came to Fort Wayne in 1827 by order of President John Quincy Adams to serve as an Indian agent. He was also a land surveyor and land agent for the Wabash and Erie Canal. Lewis Street is named in his honor.

Restoration of historic homes is in vogue these days, in part because of the soaring cost of new homes. But the approach Blanks is taking is unique.

Blanks, a former police officer who operates a security service and is also a Republican candidate for Allen County Sheriff, bought the house last summer for $1,000. "The place had been condemned and would have been torn down," Blanks said. "It had been gutted and all the windows were broken out."

Blanks said he has long been interested in preserving old buildings, so he jumped at the chance to buy the house.

But restoring homes is very expensive, so Blanks contacted the vocational center's construction trades department, whose high-school-age students regularly repair homes but had never attempted a large-scale restoration project. Their involvement will not only help the students with their building skills, but also will enable Blanks to restore the home at a much lower price than a professional contractor would charge.

Blanks' use of student labor will cost him about $18,000 to restore the home — about $6,000 less than a professional builder would charge.

Class supervisor Rick Piatt said students are receiving classroom credit for their work on Blank's house, which so far has included extensive roof repair and removal of wall plaster and a rear porch. "I wish all our projects were like this one," Piatt said.

Work has progressed slowly, in part because of the winter's bad weather and in part because the students spend only 2½ hours a day on the project. Blanks hopes the work can be completed by the time classes end in June. If not, he intends to hire some students to continue work on their own.

Blanks has consulted local preservation societies to ensure the home will retain its original Italianate flavor. He plans to use the restored home as an office and community club.

The neighborhood surrounding the home, with many of its buildings in various states of disrepair, would not logically promote preservation efforts. But that hasn't deterred Blanks, who hopes his example will prompt owners of other inner city properties to restore their buildings as well.

When the carpentry work is completed, other vocational students will be brought in to install electrical and plumbing systems.

"I just love Fort Wayne," said Blanks. "Other cities restore their old homes, but Fort Wayne has always torn them down." Blanks wants to change all that — and is putting his money where his heart is.

My first summer job was a family job. My father was a doctor, and we owned a drugstore at Hanna and Pontiac. I was probably 14, and I just waited on trade. Mostly worked the old soda fountain. I don't remember the pay.

When I was 15, I worked for a bottling company. Clippinger Bottling Co. It must have been 1940-41. They sold Mission pop. Mission Orange was a great drink in those days.

I filled in for employees on vacation. Six nights, 12 hours a night, 72 hours a week and made $10. How's that for pay? What is that? About 13 cents an hour? I probably saved $6 or $7 out of the $10.

I worked from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. Two of us worked all night to fill enough bottles for the next day.

Cemetery not just burial place; it is link with past

A town's cemeteries often are taken for granted, or made the butt of bad jokes. But a walk through some of the older ones, especially, can be an impressive confrontation not only with the community's past, but the nation's as well.

Such a place is Fort Wayne's Lindenwood Cemetery, 2324 W. Main Street. It is, in fact, precisely because the cemetery contains literally hundreds of memorials related to local, state and national history that it is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Only one other Indiana cemetery, Crown Hill in Indianapolis, is on this prestigious list.

So many of the original settlers of Allen County are buried in Lindenwood that an immensely popular booklet and a supplement, entitled "Pioneers Resting in Historic Lindenwood," were published in the 1970s, containing no less than 108 biographical sketches. The names of the very founders of Fort Wayne appear at every turn in the rolling parkland: Ewing, Hanna, Hamilton, Rudisill, Bass, Rockhill, Hoagland. But perhaps more important, hundreds of less well-known pioneer names, such as Hough, Leonard, Adams and Kiser serve to remind us that many other, simpler folk also were founders of the community.

Other ages and distinctive moments in Fort Wayne's past also are represented. Walking through the cemetery, it is impossible not to be moved, for example, by the simple markers denoting the Randall family. One of this family, Franklin Randall, was the man who led the city as mayor for four years during the traumatic period of the Civil War (1861-1865), when thousands went away to war and hundreds never returned.

Across the way, appropriately, is the marker erected in memory of "Mother George," the courageous Fort Wayne woman who served in the Union hospitals until she herself was carried off by typhoid in a southern hospital in 1865. Near her is her son-in-law, Sion Bass, who fell while leading his troops at Shiloh in 1862, along with many other Fort Wayne and Allen County men of the 30th Indiana Volunteers. Survivors of this family, led by John Bass, went on to become the greatest industrialists in later 19th century Fort Wayne, operating such companies as the Bass Foundry, Fort Wayne Electric Light, The Packard Piano Co. and several railroad lines. Their power and wealth is evident in the grandeur of their monuments.

Later ages are represented by the memorials to Art Smith, the early aviator who was affectionately called "The Bird Boy of Fort Wayne," and Paul Baer, America's first "Ace" in World War I. One of these later monuments marks one of the more touching human stories.

Crowd at Lindenwood Cemetery entrance after Memorial Day parade entered the grounds, May 30, 1900. Streetcars wait in background to take people back to town.

Samuel Morris, known as Kaboo, son of the chief of the Kroo in West Africa, had worked his way to America in 1890 to seek an education in order to take Christianity back to his native land more effectively. Helped by the Methodist Church, Morris came to Fort Wayne to attend Taylor University, then at the west end of Wayne Street. The energetic, personable and highly spiritual young man was widely liked and deeply impressed those he met with his ardor for life. But before the end of his first year in Fort Wayne he had taken ill and died. Though himself a pauper, Morris' legacy of enthusiasm caused thousands of dollars to be raised in his memory and helped to save the then financially ailing Taylor University and its mission program.

Visitors to the cemetery might also pause to reflect on the great human and material resources that have gone into the creation of this expansive memorial.

Lindenwood marks its birthday as May 30, 1860, as a non-sectarian, non-profit cemetery. Twelve men, among whom were people like Pliny Hoagland and Hugh McCulloch, put up their own resources to purchase 152 acres of woodland to serve as the new cemetery. Its name was taken from the abundance of Linden trees on the property. The land purchased in 1859 was that of the great fur trader, George W. Ewing, but originally it had been Potawatomi land ceded to the U.S. Government in 1826.

The first burial took place on July 6, 1860. A curious feature of the early growth of Lindenwood was the transfer of numerous bodies from the old city cemetery on Broadway (now McCulloch Park) to new Lindenwood. Most of the Broadway cemetery bodies were taken to Lindenwood without incident, but one could not be moved, that of Samuel Bigger, Indiana's seventh governor (1840-1843), who settled in Fort Wayne in 1843. Despite lengthy court contests because there were no relatives to approve his removal to Lindenwood (even efforts to change Indiana's strict burial laws failed), Bigger still lies in McCulloch Park in a grave set off by an iron fence.

Among the unique problems faced by Lindenwood in its early decades was a rash of body snatchings. These ghoulish activities, which became the stuff of today's late-night movies, arose as a result of the enthusiasm and peculiar needs of the early medical schools in the area, from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor to our own Fort Wayne Medical College. The most notorious of the thefts was that of the body of a young girl, one of the Ewing family, whose corpse was stolen in 1877. It was never recovered.

This monument was erected in Lindenwood Cemetery for Fredrick Hilsman, first city fireman to die in the line of duty.

For many years Lindenwood was also the site of large, often elaborate, memorial services for veterans, it being the end point for the city's annual Memorial Day (earlier called Decoration Day) parades. These ceremonies began just after the Civil War, when veterans rode horse-drawn wagons and caissons from the courthouse to the cemetery. Although since 1952 the city's Memorial Day ceremonies have been centered at the Memorial Coliseum, traditional observances still are held at Lindenwood.

In recent decades, the cemetery has expanded greatly, incorporating new forms of memorials, from gardens and mausoleums to the Schulmeier bell tower and the neo-Romanesque Chapel-of-the-Woods. All these changes, like the changes from the simple markers of the pioneers to the grand structures of the late 19th Century, reflect society's changing attitudes toward death and the memorialization of its citizens.

Magnificent tower symbol of stability in Depression era

Confidence is a bank's greatest asset and all banks seek to demonstrate their claims to patron trust through their public image. Often, this is seen in the buildings they erect as their headquarters, for these are the most obvious symbols of financial stability and prominence in the community.

There are few examples of a more successful show of confidence than that created by the construction, more than 50 years ago, of the Lincoln Tower, home of the Lincoln National Bank and Trust Co., 116 E. Berry St.

For decades, this building, the tallest in Indiana when it was opened in 1930, dominated the skyline of Fort Wayne. The wonderful 312-foot art deco structure, topped by brilliant gold trim, searchlight cupola and a giant American flag, is the very symbol of Fort Wayne's great commercial growth early in the 20th Century.

Although now surpassed in height by its neighbors — The Fort Wayne National Bank building and One Summit Square — the highly distinctive style of the Lincoln Tower still attracts the attention and admiration of visitors and residents alike.

Inside, the view is no less striking and it, too, commands confidence in the well-being of the institution. Through the two-story main entrance, richly ornamented with handmade bronze grills and art deco motifs, patrons enter the main business area where they are dwarfed by the great three-story lobby with its steeply arched roof. Over all are the large allegorical murals done by Cleveland artist, Glenn M. Shaw. Everywhere the visitor looks, there is richness, solidity, pride and power. And this is what was intended.

But what makes the story of the Lincoln Tower so extraordinary is not its imposing look but that construction of it was started at one of the worst moments in this century. Less than 30 days after the October, 1929, stock market crash that ushered in the Great Depression of the 1930s, the officers of Lincoln National Bank gambled their precious cash resources and broke ground for the erection of the tower.

The cost of the great structure was a staggering (at that time) $1.3 million. Such an investment of the bank's capital in "bricks and mortar," which could not easily be turned back into cash, should have spelled disaster for the bank. Many, in fact, said as much at the time, and the city's newspapers were filled with astonishment that the bank would dare to move ahead with its great project in such uncertain times.

Although the new building was, indeed, a great liability at first, Lincoln's real strength lay in its ability to get cash quickly. When the crash of '29 led finally, in 1933, to the failure of most of the banks in Fort Wayne, largely because they could not convert their investments into cash to meet their depositors' unprecedented withdrawal demands, only Lincoln National Bank and the nearby Peoples Trust Company remained solvent and open for business. And there stood the Lincoln Tower as the symbol of the former's strength.

Lincoln National could then boast not only that it was the largest bank in Fort Wayne, but that it was the second oldest, as well.

Lincoln National Bank was created in a boom time — Theodore Wentz and Samuel Foster founded the bank May 20, 1905. It was a considerable gamble, inasmuch as there were already nine other banks in Fort Wayne.

At first named the German-American Bank, the new financial institution prospered, and in 1914, it organized the Lincoln Trust Company. By the time America entered World War I, anti-German feelings were such that the bank changed its name to Lincoln National Bank (1918). A decade later, the bank absorbed the Lincoln Trust Company and formed the Lincoln National Bank and Trust Company, as it still is known today.

The year 1929 was important for the bank, not only because of the stock market crash, but also because it was that year the dynamic and powerful personality of Charles Buesching came into the presidency of the bank. Having risen in the bank from his first position as a teen-age messenger, he was widely respected as a daring, yet responsible, businessman. He was president for 29 years.

It was Buesching who was responsible for the construction of Lincoln Tower, begun only months after he entered office. Buesching himself later related the story (as reported by John Ankenbruck in his "Twentieth Century History of Fort Wayne") that plans for the new bank building had begun two years earlier, at the time the bank took over the Lincoln Trust Company. A building committee had been formed and all in the group favored using a local architect. Foremost in contention was Guy Mahurin, the designer of many public and private structures in Fort Wayne and the surrounding area. But Buesching did not like any of the designs submitted by local architects.

The Lincoln Tower, circa 1954.

He recalled that "the designs were clumsy and I realized they would cost just as much money as a more ideal (one). . . Just before we were to choose one of the local designs, a little runty salesman stepped up to me 15 minutes before we went into a meeting with the building committee. He represented Walker and Weeks, an architectural firm in Cleveland that had won the world competition design of the World War Memorial in Indianapolis.

"I told him my problem," Buesching continued, "that I was having to choose a local design. 'Well,' the salesman said, 'give me a week and I'll give you a design, but what kind of design are you thinking about?' I said I wanted a miniature 'Tribune Tower,' the Chicago Tribune. He said he would have it here within a week.

"So, I stepped into that meeting and told the gentlemen that I was not enthused at all about local designs, and that if there was anything wrong about spending all that money, then I would have to (bear the blame); therefore, I was entitled to my own design." Within a week, Buesching convinced the committee to choose the Walker and Weeks design. The Strauss firm of Fort Wayne was chosen as the local association architect.

Although few today think of the building as a "miniature Chicago Tribune Tower," the Lincoln Tower still stands proudly opposite the Allen County Courthouse at the end of Court Street as one of the most extraordinary examples extant of the community's confidence and strength.

FOR HIS FIRST MARRIAGE, AND CHILDREN.

JOSEPH + MARY MOVED TO CALIFORNIA ABOUT 1912
FIRST LIVING IN STOCKTON, AND LATER MOVING TO SANTA BARBARA.

1. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the plane was the fresh air. It felt like a warm blanket after a long flight. The sun was shining brightly, and the birds were chirping happily. I took a deep breath and felt a sense of relief. The world was so beautiful, and I was finally home.

2. The second thing I noticed was the smell of the earth. It was a rich, fertile scent that reminded me of my childhood. I had heard that the soil was good, and now I knew it was true. The farmers were working hard, and the crops were growing well. It was a sight to behold.

3. The third thing I noticed was the people. They were so friendly and welcoming. I had heard that the people were nice, and now I knew it was true. They were all smiling at me, and I felt like I had found a new family. The children were playing happily, and the old people were telling me stories of the past.

4. The fourth thing I noticed was the food. It was so delicious and healthy. I had heard that the food was good, and now I knew it was true. The farmers were using natural methods, and the food was full of flavor. I was so happy to be able to eat what I had grown.

5. The fifth thing I noticed was the peace. It was so peaceful and quiet. I had heard that the place was peaceful, and now I knew it was true. There were no wars or conflicts, and everyone was living in harmony. It was a true paradise.

		Copy verbatim on this form the information you find in the various records or books as you do your research. (You will find differences in records.) Make a separate sheet for each search or each name or family on your line found in a search. Then, after information has been extracted from all sources, you may easily make comparisons of statements, judge value of each, and record correct data on a permanent form such as A1, F1, F3 or F6. See The Sixth Edition THE HOW BOOK FOR GENEALOGISTS for additional suggestions regarding the use of this sheet.

Bank Mobbed With Interest By Customers

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) — Hundreds of depositors made a run on the bank Tuesday—a run in reverse—when the Schenectady Savings Bank offered 8 per cent annual interest on special certificates of deposit, bank president Joseph Flora said.

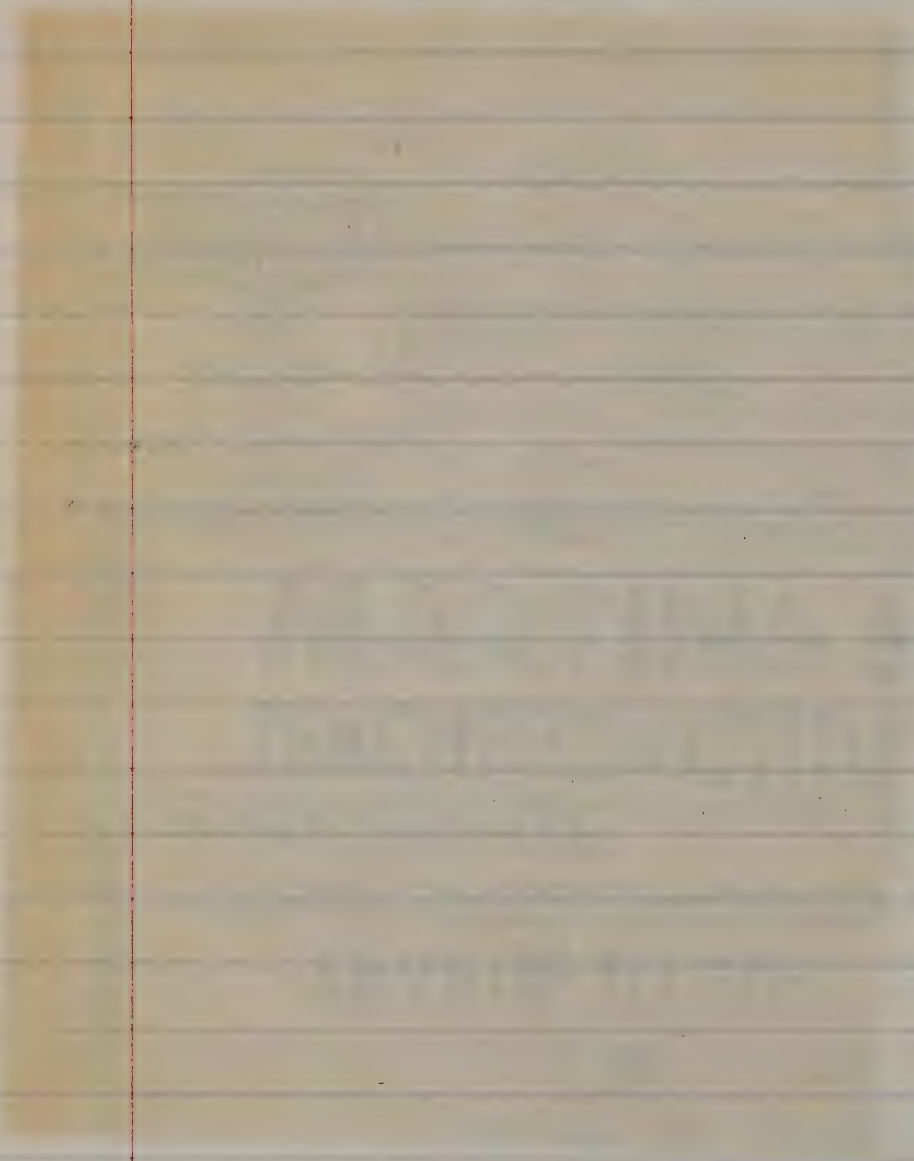

"They're just swarming in; I can't believe it," Flora said.

He said all of the bank's five branch offices were mobbed with customers seeking to either make new deposits or shift existing deposits to the high-yield certificates.

A spokesman at another area bank also offering the high interest rates, Albany Savings Bank, said the lines stretched out the doors at many of their offices, and that a person wanting to make an 8 per cent deposit faced a minimum of an hour and a half wait.

Flora said the 8 per cent rate, amounting to 8.45 per cent effective annual yield, was the highest his bank had ever offered.

An elderly Fort Wayne man was killed Wednesday morning in a freak accident in the garage of his west central home. Police said Floyd Loraine, 71, of 1602 Kelly St., was killed when his auto apparently jumped out of gear and pinned him against the wall of his garage. He was dead on arrival about 11 a.m. at St. Joseph's Hospital.

DONALD J

According to police reports, the victim had gone to his garage about 10 a.m. to change the oil in his car. His body was discovered about an hour later by a neighbor who became curious when he saw Loraine's backup lights on.

ANNE M.

T. Loraine To Be New Fire Chief

Mayor Armstrong today announced he is appointing deputy fire chief Thomas E. Loraine as fire chief.

Loraine will be replacing Donald Esterline, who has retired as fire chief after serving 26 years with the city's fire department. Esterline is taking a job with Zollner Corp.

Armstrong also announced he is appointing Elmer G. "Doc" Gammon, chief of the fire prevention bureau, to Loraine's former job of deputy chief.

Ronald B. Walden, now deputy fire prevention chief, will be elevated to the fire prevention chief's job, the mayor said.

Loraine has been a member of the department 14 years. His father, Ed, was fire chief from 1967 to through 1971.

Last week Loraine was selected by the National Fire Administration to serve as a consultant in the field of executive development.

He has taken advanced specialized training in arson, emergency control, fire tactics, fire, management and labor disputes.

In the last year he has been acting director for the Emergency Medical Services department and completed training as an EMS technician. A graduate of

Thomas E. Loraine

North Side High School, Loraine attended Purdue University.

Gammon is a 20-year veteran of the department, previously as lieutenant, captain, platoon captain and district chief before being named chief of the fire prevention bureau.

Gammon, who also has EMS training, is an expert in hazardous chemicals and fire safety and has studied at numerous arson training schools.

Walden joined the department 11 years ago and has developed the elementary school fire safety education program for all city schools.

He was president of the Fort Wayne Fire Fighters Union, Local 124, for four years and is now vice-chairman of the

Ronald B. Walden

Indiana Fire Fighters Pension Commission. He has been a local union negotiator for eight years.

Walden attended Indiana University and is a graduate machinist-toolmaker from the General Electric Apprentice School.

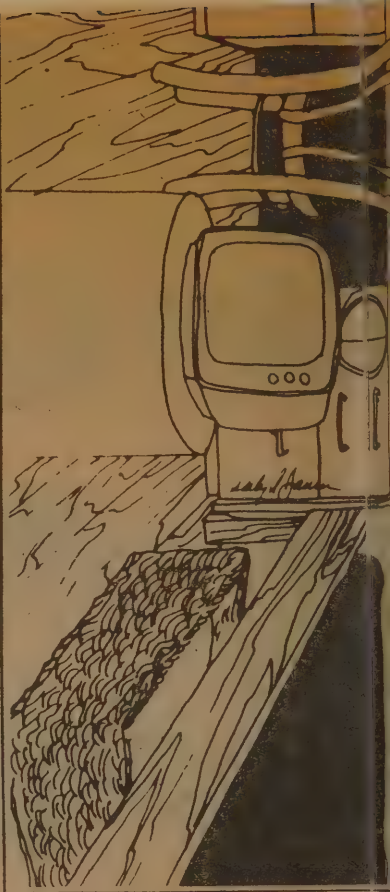

All appointments are effective immediately, Armstrong said.

a sandwich of shelves that ultimately framed the windows. L-shaped angle brackets support the shelves on either side of each window, and are supported at the ends by the walls forming the window alcove.

Three shelves, 12 inches apart, are made of particle board, available at any home center, fill in the wall between the work-surface top and the ceiling. They provide plenty of room for high-fi, baskets storing out-of-season sweaters and camp clothes, books, records, tapes and all the other odds and ends two boys can collect.

the beds, is a plastic-laminated work counter, in bright white to match the shelves. This can also be purchased at your local home center, or made for you by a kitchen counter manufacturer. Under the counter are three two-and-three-drawer file cabinets, available at most any office supply store. In this case, a brilliant orange-red was used, a marvelous foil for the deep blue of the walls.

Two white bentwood chairs double for work or socializing, while the beds, actually mattresses set on oak frames to match the walls.

Although I feel sorry for this stranger, I don't know how to tactfully discourage him from wanting more of my life than I want to give him. I'm grown up now and have no desire for a close relationship. I don't want to shut him out completely, but we have nothing in common and I see no basis for more than a distant friendship.

How would you or your readers handle this?

— FOUND IN OREGON

DEAR FOUND: I would be respectful and courteous, carefully avoiding any phony expression of affection in order to make him feel better. Any pretense of feelings that are not sincere would be more cruel than kind.

DEAR ABBY: This is our first baby, and my husband and I couldn't be happier but, wouldn't you know it, there is a problem.

My husband absolutely, positively refuses to change our baby's diaper.

He says he will do anything and everything in the line of housework, cooking, laundry, marketing, etc., but he simply cannot bring himself to change a diaper! He says that is a MOTHER'S job.

Abby, my husband is the dearest, sweetest, most considerate guy in the world, but his mind is closed on this particular subject and he will not budge. What is your opinion?

DEAR MOM: I hope so, too. But, unfortunately, some will not. Read on for another life-saving letter on that subject:

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote about her small daughter being found blue and nearly lifeless after having been trapped for hours in an abandoned refrigerator in a neighbor's yard.

Your advice was good, but parents should also be aware of the potential danger of refrigerators and upright freezers that are IN USE!

Children have been known to climb inside these (in basements) to "hide." They are equally as dangerous.

Subject: English

Topic: Poetry

Assignment: Essay

Question: Discuss the theme of love in the poem 'Sonnet 130' by William Shakespeare.

Answer: The poem 'Sonnet 130' by William Shakespeare is a love poem that challenges the idealized depictions of love found in contemporary poetry. The speaker describes his beloved with realistic, even unflattering, details, contrasting them with the exaggerated claims of other poets.

Question: How does the speaker's description of his beloved differ from the idealized depictions of love found in contemporary poetry?

Answer: The speaker's description of his beloved is realistic and unflattering, contrasting with the idealized depictions of love found in contemporary poetry. He describes her eyes as 'like little stars' and her hair as 'black as blackbirds'.

Question: What is the significance of the speaker's description of his beloved as 'like little stars'?

Answer: The speaker's description of his beloved as 'like little stars' is significant because it suggests that her eyes are not the idealized 'brighter than the sun' of other poets, but rather are small and humble.

Question: How does the speaker's description of his beloved as 'black as blackbirds' contribute to the poem's theme?

Answer: The speaker's description of his beloved as 'black as blackbirds' contributes to the poem's theme of realistic love. It suggests that her hair is not the idealized 'golden waves' of other poets, but rather is dark and natural.

Conclusion: The poem 'Sonnet 130' by William Shakespeare is a love poem that challenges the idealized depictions of love found in contemporary poetry. The speaker describes his beloved with realistic, even unflattering, details, contrasting them with the exaggerated claims of other poets.

HENRY
LOTZ

THURSDAY 2-26-1974

PIONEER BUILDER, MAYOR IN 1843-44

Henry Lotz, (1797-1845) prominent pioneer canal builder, became Fort Wayne's third mayor in 1843. He was re-elected the following year. Lotz resigned as mayor after serving sixteen months because his private business frequently kept him away from the city.

He was general contractor for the first canal aqueduct to span the St. Mary's River. It was located on the site between the old Nickel Plate Railroad bridges, near the Main Street bridge.

One of the unique ordinances passed by city council, when Lotz was mayor, called for a "penalty for riding or driving any horse faster than an ordinary gait of travel, except when going for a physician."

Mr. Lotz rests in Lindenwood where full modern cemetery facilities include single and family plots, mausoleums, garden crypts, two chapels and a crematory.

1st PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR DURING CIVIL WAR ERA

Rev. John M. Lowrie, D. D. (1817-1867), was pastor of First Presbyterian Church from 1856 until his death, September 26, 1867.

During his pastorate and through the Civil War years, the congregation showed steady increase in membership. On July 27, 1863, the congregation held a special meeting and adopted resolutions to enlarge and modernize its second edifice which was located at the southeast corner of Berry and Clinton.

And during the first year of Rev. Lowrie's pastorate, natural gas became available in Fort Wayne and the congregation installed gas lighting to replace oil lamps.

Rev. Lowrie was buried in Lindenwood Cemetery which is now listed in the National Register of Historic Places.
